PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

David Zaslowsky is an independent arbitrator based in New York and Miami, with over 40 years experience. He launched David Zaslowsky Arbitration after a distinguished career at the New York office of Baker & McKenzie, where he served as Chairman of the office's Disputes Group and specialized in international arbitration and transnational litigation.

David spent much of the first ten years of his career representing U.S. companies (many in the energy sector) in arbitration proceedings against the government of Iran at the Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal. He has also participated in arbitrations, both inside and outside the United States, before many of the leading global arbitral institutions. And David has sat as an arbitrator (as both wing and chair).

A graduate of Yale Law School with an undergraduate degree in computer science, David has particular expertise in technology-related disputes, including cryptocurrency, blockchain, patent litigation and artificial intelligence. He was named one of the top 25 blockchain lawyers in the United States by Attorney Intel (2025) and has been recognized in Chambers USA, Chambers Global and Best Lawyers in America for his expertise in international arbitration.

ARBITRATION EXPERIENCE

David has appeared before the following arbitral institutions and tribunals:

- American Arbitration Association (AAA)
- International Chamber of Commerce (ICC)
- London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA)
- International Centre for Dispute Resolution (ICDR)
- Hong Kong International Arbitration Centre (HKIAC)
- International Institute for Conflict Prevention (CPR)
- JAMS
- United Nations Compensation Commission (UNCC)
- Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal
- General Arbitration Council of the Textile and Apparel Industry
- NASD
- Ad hoc arbitrations

He has also litigated numerous arbitration-adjacent issues, including compelling arbitration, confirmation/vacatur of awards, discovery in aid of arbitration under 28 U.S.C. Section 1782, and foreign attachments.
